

ANDREW MERCURIO, DVM , DACVS

Surgery

Originally from the small town of Cumberland, RI, Dr. Mercurio graduated as class salutatorian from Assumption College in Worcester, MA. He attended Tufts University Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine, then headed south where he completed a small animal medicine and surgery rotating internship at the University of Georgia. While studying there, Dr. Mercurio met his wife, who is also a veterinarian. Dr. Mercurio completed a combined master of science and small animal surgery residency at The Ohio State University in Columbus, OH, and earned his board certification in small animal surgery. Dr. Mercurio enjoys all aspects of soft tissue and orthopedic surgery, with special interests in surgical diseases of the upper airway, fracture repair, and advanced oncological surgery. When he isn't helping animals, Dr. Mercurio enjoys camping, skiing, going to the beach, playing guitar, drawing and painting. He and his wife have a son and daughter as well as two rescued dogs and cats.
